PRAYER FOR RAIN – Almighty God, we are in need of rain. We realize now, looking up into the clear, blue sky, what a marvel even the least drop of rain really is. To think that so much water can fall out of the sky, which now is empty and clear! We place our trust in You. We are sure that You know our needs. But You want us to ask You anyway, to show You that we know we are dependent on You. Look on our dry hills and fields, dear God, and bless them with the living blessing of soft rain. Then the land will rejoice, and the rivers will sing Your praises, and the hearts of men will be made glad. Amen.

26th Sunday in Ordinary Time – While my father did not have a vineyard, the parable of the two sons in this weekend's Gospel certainly applied to my brother and me. As we grew up, there were times in which we each acted as first one and then the other son from the parable. Sometimes I was the one who said, "No," and then changed my mind, and other times it was my brother who acted in that way. As we grew older, we came to see how our parents had guided us as we matured, and recognized that our father's will for us was to have a wholesome life, in which caring for others and helping those in need played a big part. It was something that our father had learned from his own father, a gift I now realize that was passed down from one generation to the next.

It was only later in life that I began to hear the stories of how my grandfather had helped the poor in the city, and the ways his own mother had given away food from the family run store during the years of the Great Depression. Such family history goes a long way toward melting away any residual selfishness that may exist in one's heart.

The parable in this weekend's Gospel is about faith. Jesus cautions the chief priests and elders. He indicates that they should be careful about whom they judge, since tax collectors and prostitutes (i.e., sinners) are seeking conversion, but they are not. Jesus' words could well apply to us. Before we begin judging those who may not show up every Sunday, or who may be living in challenging circumstances, we might want to look at our own lives. A charitable heart and a kind word might go a long way toward helping someone become more faithful. What act of kindness on our part will help someone draw closer to Christ?

Free to Change and to Be Changed

A real change of heart, a complete conversion, is no simple matter. Many things conspire to keep us from changing or accepting change. Today's readings grapple with the most fundamental changes of our lives—from sinners to forgiven sons and daughters, from ego-centered and self-absorbed creatures to Christ-centered people with generous hearts.

When Ezekiel challenges the people of his time to true change and conversion of heart, he identifies their resistance with their own frozen judgments, “The way of the Lord is unfair!” Perhaps their comparative lens on life never allowed them to see themselves and their own need to change or the mercy of God in providing them the opportunity to be changed.

In the Gospel reading, Jesus issues a similar but somewhat different challenge to the religious leaders of his time. Absorbed and caught up in their own presuppositions about good and bad, right and wrong, they, too, are frozen in their positions and unable to recognize their need to change and be changed. The great public sinners of the time—tax collectors and prostitutes—are more open to acknowledging their need for a change of heart.

In the second reading, Paul offers an earnest plea to the Philippians to let go and be free of self-interest in order to change and live in an entirely new way—the way of Jesus' self-emptying.

In various ways, today's word of God captures our fundamental resistance to a change or conversion of heart. It is often affected by our being too caught up with ourselves. Letting go of self-concern frees us to change and be changed by God's grace and power.

The Faith of the Church

All followers of Jesus are called to a perfect holiness of life, something that only God can accomplish in us. Still, for our part, we need to cooperate with God's grace by being open to change and grow in the life that Christ offers us. This kind of availability to what God has to offer is the hallmark of the lives of the saints (Cf. the Second Vatican Council, Dogmatic Constitution on the Church, n. 40).

Questions of the Week

It is notoriously difficult for us to determine what holds us bound. And yet we must identify those things that contribute to our lack of freedom. Only when they are identified can we let them go and be free to embrace what Christ wants of us.

Adults

How can I identify the things that keep me bound to an old way of living and cut me off from embracing a full and complete change of heart by God's grace?

Children

How can I let God know that I want to do what he wants me to do?

Responding to God's Word . . .

Our intellects enable us to know and understand ourselves and the world around us. Our wills enable us to make decisions and take action. Today's word gives special attention to our will and our process of making decisions, especially important decisions that give direction to our lives.

We can live willfully, that is, determined to exercise control and have things our way. Alternately, we can live willingly, that is, in a way that makes us open and available, especially to what God calls us to be and to do.

We could easily be living among the people of Ezekiel's time or the Philippians to whom Paul wrote or with those who heard the teaching of Jesus. It is and has always been a universal spiritual challenge to let our wills, our capacity to decide and choose, be pliable and ready to move with the direction God gives us—God's will.

The effects of sin and our inclination to ego-centeredness dispose us to be willful. First, we must recognize how that plays out in our lives. Then, with God's grace and in the supportive environment of a community of faith, we can embrace a different way, the way of willingness.

Meditation Moment

A man turned to drink. He also turned from God and his family. One day while walking along, repenting how his life turned out, he saw a bent, rusty nail in the gutter. It reminded him of himself and his life. So he picked it up and took it home. Placing the nail on an anvil, he began to straighten it out and clean it up. An hour later, it looked almost new again. Then it occurred to him. He could straighten out and clean up his own life in the same way. That thought triggered his conversion. He turned away from drink and back to God and to his family. Today, he keeps that nail, straightened and cleaned, in his wallet.

For reflection . . .

Was there a time when I was almost like that bent, rusty nail? What changed me?

WHO REPENTS SIN IS ALMOST INNOCENT.

SENECA

FROM VISION BY MARK LINK, SJ

Reshape My Uncertain Heart

Jesus,
as I watch you in your temptations and in the struggles of your earthly ministry and in the garden of Gethsemane and on the cross of Calvary, I know your only focus is doing your Father's will.
Reshape my own uncertain heart so often caught in my own will and my own plans.
Conform my heart to yours,
so that I may be finally and fully free to embrace the holy will
of God. Amen.

Carry this thought in your heart as a guide for your faith journey this week.

When we focus on doing our own will or accomplishing only our own goals, we do not move beyond ourselves. When we are open and available to doing God's will, a universe of infinite possibility opens up for us.

SUGGESTIONS

Use one of these suggestions or one of your own to respond to God's Word this week.

In the home. Strategically place a card with the words from the Lord's Prayer "thy will be done" as a reminder to live in a willing way.

In the workplace or in school. Decide to do something that reflects the will of others rather than your own. Reflect and pray on that action.

In the community. Identify advertising that appeals to the possibility of controlling life and arranging various outcomes. Reflect on the message.

Profile in Faith

Matt Talbot (?–1925), an Irish laborer, has been named "venerable" by the Church. In his early years, he suffered from alcoholism and stole to support his drinking. He gave up alcohol and devoted himself entirely to a life of prayer and reparation. He moved from doing his will to doing God's will.
